SINGAPORE: Japan's NEC Corporation today announced an agreement with Tata Teleservices Ltd \(TTL\) under which NEC's iPASOLINK platform would be deployed for the transformation of TTL's back-haul mobile transport network.

"As the Indian mobile communication market continues its rapid expansion, operators face the challenge of making significant investments in order to provide next generation mobile broadband services while managing CAPEX and OPEX," said Takayuki Morita, Senior Vice President of NEC.

He added, "This agreement between TTL and NEC proves that mobile operators have the appetite for a single, converged and flexible back-haul platform that they can manage and adapt according to their network service demands."
